If we need to generalize about the life of old people in Taiwan, we can say that they lead a lonely life. Many of them live alone because they are either widowed or divorced. A deep sense of separation from others and thereby a sense of isolation make them very sad. Under these circumstances, they feel that they are living in a hostile environment where others pay little attention to them. However, old people can reestablish their role in society by taking part in community activities and making friends with others. If they are willing to try, they will no longer feel isolated.
