Linda is in her third year of junior high school, and she has to spend most of her time studying for the entrance exam. In fact, her parents make her study all the time. They seldom let her watch TV, play computer games or go to the movies with her classmates on weekends. However, Linda has never complained about it because her parents always cheer her up when she feels tired. They told her that knowledge is power, so Linda has believed that spending more time on her studies will do her good. Linda always thinks positively. I think that she is a good example for us to follow.
